

Part II.
Chapter I.
~~Charles Search~~

We have followed the Portuguese monarchy till its entire rottenness when ~~it~~ Franco is called up to power. We have traced the various currents of degeneration that had brought it and the people to the state in question. We have shown that the monarchy in Portugal had now reached the ultimate period of its reaction, when, rotten and corrupt, it was forced to attack the republicans, to defend its worthless existence. And, finally, we have ~~sh~~ analysed the character of the man who at this moment was called to power, showing how terribly he was fitted for the last statesman, or one of the last, of a corrupt and incapable system, how he condensed in himself all its evils intolerant evils.

Given the conditions of the events, given the character of France, it is no difficult matter to determine what was likely to follow and indeed did follow {...}

Augustus Charles Berkeley is a creature of bad instincts.

My brother is at present in Spain and is therefore unable early to reply to your letter of the {...} inst. He will be back in a few days, when I will give it him immediately

Very faithfully
Charles Search.
