Transcrição

Some men are good and other men are bad.
This is but a small form of some great Law
Transcending man's mind, that dreamt of free-will.

Men are not equal in their minds and hearts
But all are equal in their right to bliss.
And this because all live. ~~It is~~ 'Tis to do harm
To kill an ant, or break the spider's ~~web~~ web
As to wipe out a man or break his house,

Transcrição

We who hate
The robber who with violence doth snatch
From ~~farm~~ hall and household jewel a {...}
We, who imprison this, in words extol
Napoleon's "glorious name"

Ah wretched slaves
Moths caught in every feeble candle's glare,
Who have no necking for the distant star.
